Created to ensure the survival of coho salmon and steelhead trout in Battle Creek and the Sacramento River. To increase the fish population, the hatchery transports adult salmon swimming up Battle Creek to spawn in holding ponds. Eggs extracted from female fish are fertilized and then incubated until they hatch. When the fish grow to two or three inches long, they are released into Battle Creek. The best viewing time is October through November, when the fish swim up the hatchery's ladder. Tours are available year-round. Visitors may also picnic in designated areas along the banks of Battle Creek. Open Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m.-4:00 p.m. Groups of 40 or more should always call ahead.

The town of Shasta, known as Reading Springs when Major P.B. Reading found gold here in 1848, was once Northern California's hub. In the 1870s when the Central Pacific Railroad connected points south to the new town of Redding, Shasta's importance faded. The park, a registered historical landmark, contains the town's old cemetery and the brick ruins of the original central business district. The museum houses a fine collection of historical artifacts, books and paintings. The museum is open Thursday through Monday, 10:00 a.m.-5:00 p.m.
